

Syringic acid induces cancer cell death in the presence of Cu (II) ions via pro-oxidant activity

Marzieh Rashedinia^{1,2}, Azita Nasrollahi², Marzieh Shafaghat², Shahrzad Momeni², Forough Iranpak^{3,4}, Jamileh Saberzadeh³, Rita Arabsolghar^{3,5}, Zahra Sabahi^{1✉}

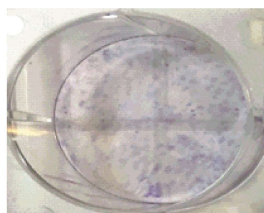

¹Medicinal Plants Processing Research Center, Shiraz University of Medical Sciences, Shiraz, Iran

²Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology, Faculty of Pharmacy, Shiraz University of Medical Sciences, Shiraz, Iran

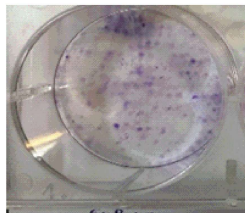

³Diagnostic Laboratory Sciences and Technology Research Center, School of Paramedical Sciences, Shiraz University of Medical Sciences, Shiraz, Iran

⁴Department of Biochemistry, Islamic Azad University of Shiraz, Shiraz, Iran

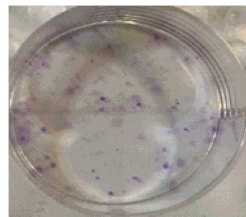

⁵Department of Medical Laboratory Sciences, School of Paramedical Sciences, Shiraz University of Medical Sciences, Shiraz, Iran

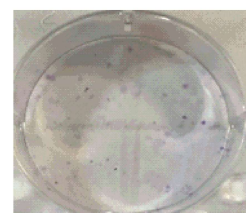

Control

SYR 250 μM

CU(II) 250 μM

SYR+Cu(II) 250 μM

Supplementary Figure: Effect of co-treatment with SYR and Cu (II) on colony-forming in HepG2 cells