

Asian Pacific Journal of Tropical Biomedicine

Bo Cui, MD/PhD
Executive Editor-in-Chief

Dr. Bo Cui currently serves as Executive Editor in Chief of Asian Pacific Journal of Tropical Biomedicine. He is also an adjunct professor at Shantou University School of Medicine. He received his graduate education in the USA and Canada with MA in English, MSc and PhD in microbiology and immunology. His professional experience includes work at Duke University Medical Center and Li Ka-shing Foundation. Before his current position, Dr. Cui served as Executive Editor of the Journal of Biomedical Research and deputy editor of the Journal of International Translational Medicine and a Distinguished Professor at Nanjing Medical University.

Dr. Cui is a cancer biologist and was a member of AACR and EACR. He is also a member of Council of Science Editors (CSE). He is also a peer reviewer of multiple medical journals and a consultant of several private and public traded companies. Dr. Cui's expertise includes cancer biology, cancer immunology and cancer therapeutics. His research work has been published in international journals including Neuro Oncology and Molecular Pharmacology. He also edited several English textbooks including A New Course for Public Health English, Dictionary of Parasitology and a 10-book series of Medical English. Most recently, he co-translated and edited Principles and Practice of Spinal Internal Fixation Systems.